* Madras Act XVI of 1911.

† Madras Act V of 1911.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The Stage Carriages Act has been in force in the Madras Presidency ever since 1882. It has been brought to the notice of Government from time to time that difficulties were experienced in the working of the Act in certain districts. Neither the Act nor the rules framed thereunder made adequate provision for any effective control over the drivers, nor for a regulated system of fares and conditions of plying. To remedy these defects suggestions had been made to repeal the Act altogether and amalgamate it with the Madras Hackney Carriage Act by suitably amending section 2 of the latter Act and by carrying with other amendments so might be necessary to enable the Government to extend the whole or any portions of the Hackney Carriage Act to the goods previously controlled by rules framed under the Stage Carriage Act. Further the stage carriages have been now displaced by motor traffic in many places in the Presidency and are gradually disappearing in some others. In view of these facts the Government have decided to repeal the Stage Carriage Act in respect of its application to the Presidency and to provide for the extension of the Hackney Carriage Act or any portions thereof to the places where the Stage Carriage Act was previously in force by suitably amending the Madras Hackney Carriage Act, 1911.

2. It has been found that the existing rules of fare levied under the Hackney Carriage Act have been in existence from 1879, though the provisions of the Act have been revised from time to time to suit changed conditions. The expenses of working the Hackney Carriage Act have increased considerably. It is considered necessary that in a matter like this the Government should approximate to the expenditure incurred in working the Act, and the only means to bring this about is to raise the scale of fare. It is therefore proposed to amend the sections relating to the levy of fare for the different purposes under the Act.
